Dear Mr. Knoche:

By way of introduction, I am a member of the Purchasing Management Association of Pittsburgh's "Executive Night" Committee. Specifically, it is my responsibility to obtain the services of the keynote speaker of the evening. Executive Night is our highlight event of the year and attracts the top executives from Pittsburgh-based corporations including people from U.S. Steel, J&L, Koppers, PPG, Rockwell, Gulf Oil, Westinghouse, my own corporation -- Cyclops, etc. We normally expect between 500 to 600 executives to attend.

In the past, we have had such speakers as Gerald Ford, William Siedman, Admiral James Calvert and William Ruckleshaus.

It is understood that you have a very busy schedule; however, we would be most delighted if you will accept our invitation to be a guest speaker at our "Executive Night" to be held April 19, 1977, at the Pittsburgh William Penn Hotel beginning 5:30 PM and lasting until 10:00 PM.

Recognizing that your nephew Roger has previously made a contact personally for me, I would be most appreciative of receiving your formal acceptance in the near future so that our plans may be finalized.

Very truly yours

BIOGRAPHIC PROFILE

E. HENRY KNOCHE

Mr. E. Henry Knoche, the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence, attended Bethany College (West Virginia) and Colorado University and was graduated from Washington and Jefferson College (Pennsylvania). Mr. Knoche served two tours of active duty as a Navy officer in World War Two and the Korean War. He joined the Central Intelligence Agency in 1953 as an intelligence analyst specializing in Far Eastern political and military affairs with a knowledge of Chinese.

From 1962 onward Mr. Knoche held a variety of management positions in the CIA in such diverse areas as current intelligence, photographic intelligence, and planning and budgeting. Among other posts he was director of the office charged with evaluating foreign military developments. Early in 1975, during the inquiries into American intelligence activities by the Rockefeller Presidential Commission and the Senate and House Select Committees, he served as Special Assistant to the Director of Central Intelligence in liaison with those conducting the inquiries.

In the fall of 1975, Mr. Knoche was named Associate Deputy to the Director and was involved in the co-ordination and management of resources of the U. S. Intelligence Community which includes the CIA as well as intelligence elements of other agencies.

In April of 1976, he was named by President Ford to be Deputy Director of Central Intelligence in charge of the day-to-day operations of CIA. He was confirmed by unanimous consent of the Senate on 30 June 1976.
